TYPES OF UNLAWFUL DISCRIMINATION

It is unlawful to:

- Discriminate directly or indirectly in recruitment or employment on grounds of sex, gender, pregnancy, colour, race, nationality, ethnic or national origins, sexual orientation or religion or belief, age, or because someone is married or is a civil partner.
- Treat someone less favourably in recruitment or employment on grounds of disability in comparison to others without disability, unless the less favourable treatment can be justified.
- Fail to make reasonable adjustments to overcome barriers to employment caused by disability.
- The duty to make reasonable adjustments includes the removal, adaptation, or alteration of physical features, if the physical features make it impossible or unreasonably difficult for disabled people to make use of services.
- Discriminate unjustifiably on grounds of age in relation to employment.
- Discriminate, without justification, on grounds of disability or to fail to make reasonable adjustments to overcome barriers to using services caused by disability.
- Discriminate after employment, e.g., providing discriminatory information in a reference for a former employee, which is not correct.
- Discriminate directly or indirectly in the provision of goods, facilities, or services to customers on grounds of sex (which may include gender reassignment), pregnancy, colour, race, nationality, age, or ethnic or national origins.
- Victimise someone because of alleged unlawful discrimination or supported someone to make a complaint or given evidence in relation to a complaint.

GLOSSARY TERMS OF UNLAWFUL DISCRIMINATION

Direct discrimination occurs where a person is treated less favourably than another in comparable circumstances on a prohibited ground. An example of direct sex discrimination would be refusing to employ an individual due to pregnancy.

Indirect discrimination occurs where a provision, criterion or practice is applied, and as such would be to the detriment of a considerably larger proportion of the relevant group, to which the individual belongs than to others, which is not objectively justifiable, and which is to the individual's detriment. An example of indirect sex discrimination could be requiring everyone to work full time unless there is a good reason, unrelated to sex, as to why the particular job has to be done on a full-time basis, since requiring everyone to work full time could be at the disadvantage to parents, single-parents, and any individual(s) who require flexible working hours.

Harassment occurs where there is unwanted conduct related to one of the prohibited grounds which has the purpose of violating a person's dignity or creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for that person (or is reasonably considered by that person to have the effect of violating a person's dignity or of creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment), even if this effect was not intended by the person responsible for the conduct.

Bullying can take many forms but is the result of misconduct through negative actions and practices. This involves the intentional intimidation or belittling of an individual or Groups of employees.

Failure to make reasonable adjustments occurs where arrangements disadvantage an individual because of a disability and reasonable adjustments are not made to overcome the disadvantage.

Victimisation occurs where someone is treated less favourably than others because the individual has alleged unlawful discrimination or supported someone to make a complaint or given evidence in relation to a complaint.
