Policy Statement

Laine is part of Punch Pubs & Co, and we share group-wide policies, which is why you may see Punch referenced throughout this document.

Purpose of this Policy

At Laine we are committed to dealing with any concerns about the company openly, responsibly, and confidentially. If you have any genuine concerns about something to do with the company – for example, you believe mismanagement or malpractice has occurred or may occur in the future – we naturally want to know about this as soon as possible.

This policy sets out our procedure for raising concerns about incidents of malpractice or mismanagement in the workplace, and how we will deal with those concerns. This could relate to any practice, procedure or policy carried out by any officer or Laine team member – for example, a breach of rules, irregularity, a danger to our team members or our customers, financial malpractice, breach of legal obligations, or something that may damage the environment.

Overview

The Public Interest Disclosures Act 1998 encourages staff to raise their concerns internally about wrongdoing in the workplace.

This includes concerns about:

- someone having committed, or being likely to commit, a criminal offence.
- a failure to comply with any legal or regulatory obligation.
- a miscarriage of justice.
- something which endangers the health and safety of an individual.
- damage to the environment.
- fraud or financial irregularity.
- blackmail, corruption, or bribery.
- deliberate concealment relating to any of the above.

Wrongdoing is anything that is illegal, improper or unethical, and may impact the Laine's image and/or profits. Misconduct and malpractice can happen in any company and can go undetected and unpunished if those who know about it are afraid to speak out. Individuals are therefore encouraged to come forward with any information if they feel it is appropriate to do so.

Any disclosure made that is thought to be true, even if it turns out that you are mistaken, will be protected by this policy if you have a reasonable suspicion that malpractice has occurred, is occurring or is likely to occur. We do, however, ask that Laine team members do not carry out investigations of their own accord, as this could cause issues with any future investigation or alert individuals and result in the destruction of evidence.

How to report a concern

Our primary aim is to prevent workplace malpractice from occurring in the first place. If it happens, we want to prevent it from recurring. If appropriate, we will make every effort to resolve the situation promptly. If that isn't possible, we will then take further action to investigate the matter fully and take appropriate action.

Initial Report

If you have a concern about workplace malpractice, you should first discuss it with your line manager or Head of Department. They will attempt to resolve the matter as promptly as possible.

There may be circumstances where you feel unable to approach your line manager or Head of Department. If so, you can raise your concerns directly, in confidence, with one of the people listed below.

How will Laine investigate?

Any individual alleged to have carried out wrongdoing will be dealt with in accordance with the Laine's Ethics and Code of Conduct Policy, the formal Disciplinary Procedures Policy and if necessary, the law. They will be notified of the allegation made against them as soon as is practically possible.

Laine will carry out an internal investigation and, if necessary, will also call in external support or report the matter to the Police if required. However, any Laine team member reporting a wrongdoing can be assured that Laine will deal with the matter sensitively, and confidentiality will always remain a priority.

The investigation will be carried out as quickly as possible. It is not possible to lay down precise timescales for the investigation as this very much depends on the nature of the allegation, and Laine will wish to carry out suitable enquiries.

Laine will write to the individual who has notified us of the alleged wrongdoing, to acknowledge the complaint, and the Laine team member will be kept informed on the progress of the investigation and once concluded, the outcome.

Confidentiality and unfounded allegations

Confidentiality

So far as possible, Laine will not disclose your identity, if known, at any time, unless it's necessary to do so for the purposes of our investigations, to obtain legal advice, or to comply with a legal or regulatory obligation.

This applies provided you:

- raise any genuine concerns and not out of malice
- have reasonable grounds for believing your concerns to be true, and
- have complied, in full, with the spirit of the policy and the process set out above.

While we will make every effort to ensure if it becomes necessary to identify you for the reasons stated above, we will not do this without discussion with you.

We are committed to ensuring that you are not subjected to any harassment, victimisation, or disciplinary action because of raising your concerns. And, as far as possible, any supporting evidence relating to your disclosure will be always kept secure.

Unfounded Allegations

If you make an allegation that is not confirmed by subsequent investigation, no action will be taken against you. However, malicious allegations may result in disciplinary action against you.
